Trentham.

The Parish of Trentham from the earliest times up to 1841 comprised the area (7,317 acres) covered by the modern ecclesiastical parishes of Trentham, Blurton, Hanford, Dresden, and part of Normacot and Butterton. All these parishes therefore have an interest in the Trentham Registers. There are seven Volumes of Registers. The earlier entries, from 1558 to about 1599, are transcriptions from the original. The condition of the Books and the writing are good throughout. The Rev. Jeffrey Williams, 1706 to 1732, wrote a perfect hand, and evidently took pride in the Registers. The record of Collections at Trentham and Blurton, 1661-1694, at the end of Vols. 2 and 3, is curious.

The Church.

Trentham (or Hanchurch) had a Religious House, founded by Ethelred, King of Mercia, from A.D. 680, and over it he placed, as Abbess, his niece, S. Werburgh, daughter of his brother and predecessor Wulphere. This Monastery was probably destroyed by the Danes, but there was a priest, holding land at Trentham at the time of the Domesday Survey. The Monastery was restored in some form in William II.'s reign by Hugh Lupus, Earl of Chester, the Royal Domesne of Trentham having temporarily fallen into the hands of these Norman Earls. It became an Augustinian Priory by Charter of Earl Ranulph de Gernons, c. 1153, confirmed by Henry II. when he resumed possession of the Manor.

At the dissolution by Henry VIII., the Monastery was granted to Chas. Brandon, Duke of Suffolk, who sold it to Jas. Leveson in 1540.

The Chancel was demolished at the "Reformation," and has never been re-built. The peal of 6 bells, dated 1714, was sold to Wolstanton, 1767, at 9d. per lb., and the churchwardens received one large bell from Wolstanton on the same terms. The tower was taken down 1752. The Church was re-opened 1844, after being re-built from the ground by the Duke of Sutherland. The new Burial Ground was opened September, 1808.

It is supposed that there was once a Church at Hanchurch, dedicated to All Saints, in the field still surrounded by ancient yews.

Blurton Chapel was probably an Oratory of Trentham Priory, but is never mentioned in any document, so far as is known, until it is found marked in Saxton's Map, 1577. It was there; but had probably fallen completely into decay, and was not worth naming in the various Inventries. It was re-built, 1626, and endowed with a parsonage and lands, 1633, by the gift of John Keling, barrister of the Inner Temple. A chancel was built (c. 1750) by the Lanes of Longton Hall, and a north aisle, with galleries, by the Marquis of Stafford, 1822. The Church was "restored," 1865-6, in memory of Canon Hutchinson, and the chancel in 1891. Some eighteenth century Marriages, from a Register at Blurton, are included in the following pages.

Words or figures printed in italics within round brackets, thus ( ), are taken from the Lichfield Transcripts. Where two Christian names are given, e.g., as in the entry for 15 Oct., 1670, 1 the first name "William" is that written in the original register; the second, (John) is that written in the transcripts. One of these is wrong, as it is quite exceptional to find persons with two Christian names before the XIXth century.

[These last Blurton entries are registered by Edmund Carr.]

[The rest of Vol. VI. is blank.]

[Note at the beginning of Vol. VI.]

NOTE.—Some confusion exists in the entries made by Mr. Moss, arising partly from irregularity in the insertion of the Blurton Register, partly from his omission to note the year of each Baptism, & partly from the running title, which usually shews the year when he made the entries instead of the year when the children were baptized. I have endeavoured to clear up this confusion by marginal dates, always subjoining my own name to these additions and alterations.
